Weave to Dust, Power Crave and Layers of Compassion

All three items are made for the Wizard Slayer class only.

Together they form a set.

However, the sets only have the same background story, so there is no loss of power of the items if they are not equipped on the same character.

All items are unidentified which will get the generic vanilla in-game description if unidentified.

All items are equippable after the user reaches level 4.

All image formats are PNG.

Descriptions

Weave to Dust

This enchanted katana is called "Weave to Dust". Its name comes from its ability to dispel any wards a caster has cast on themselves with one successful hit. It's actually part of a set of Wizard Slayer gear. On closer inspection, it becomes clear that this sword with its jeweled hilt is not a classic Kara-Tur katana. It was forged in Calimshan by an unknown blacksmith. This blacksmith infused the gem with the magic that gives the unusual weapon its magical properties. It is clear that the design idea behind this katana is to combine a near-perfect battle sword with the stunning aesthetic of the Calimshan Forge. Further inspection reveals that the magic in this item seems to be somehow incomplete. The customer who commissioned this unusual sword from the unknown smith, is himself known as Akun Zaran, a halfling Wizard Slayer.

Combat abilities:

- 15% chance to cast „Dispel Magic“ on its target after a successful hit.

Restrictions:

- Character needs level 4 to equip „Weave to Dust“
- Can only be equipped by Wizard Slayer

Power Crave

This enchanted katana is called "Power Crave". It's actually part of a set of Wizard Slayer gear. Its name comes from its ability to increase its power with each successful hit. The power increase will rise to max +3, decreases over time or as power is consumed. In doing so, the sword changes its shape, which represents its strength. At first glance it looks like this sword is in poor condition, but upon closer inspection it becomes clear that this weapon with three jewels on the hilt is not a classic Kara-Tur katana and that the magic actually comes from the jewels. It was forged in Calimshan by an unknown blacksmith. Further investigation reveals that the magic within this item appears to be somehow incomplete. The customer who commissioned "Power Crave" from the unknown smith, is himself known as Akun Zaran, a halfling Wizard Slayer.

Combat abilities:

- Recommended as a main hand weapon
- Increases the off-hands chance to hit as if it were equipped with the main hand while the weapon is charged
- Increases its magic level by +1 with each hit, up to a maximum of +3
- +1 gives the wielder one chance to hit to increase to +2 for 1 rounds
- +2 gives the wielder a chance of two hits, increasing to +3 for 2 rounds
- +3 allows the wielder three attacks for 2 rounds, after which the sword reverts to its non-magical state

Restrictions:

- Character needs level 4 to equip „Power Crave“
- Can only be equipped by Wizard Slayer

Layers of Compassion

This enchanted plate armor is called "Layers of Compassion". It's actually part of a set of Wizard Slayer gear. Its name comes from its ability to absorb various types of magical damage. Its golden appearance is purely a design choice, but not so much the glowing green jewel in the center of the plate armor. It was forged in Calimshan by an unknown blacksmith. Also, whoever created "Layers of Compassion" appears to be a master of arcane forging. Upon closer inspection, the magic in this plate armor seems somehow incomplete. The customer who commissioned this armor from the unknown smith, is himself known as Akun Zaran, a halfling Wizard Slayer.

Combat abilities:

- 25% resistance to fire, cold, electricity, poison, acid and magical damage

Restrictions:

- Character needs level 4 to equip „Layers of Compassion“
- Can only be equipped by Wizard Slayer
