Weave to Dust, Power Crave and Layers of Compassion

All three items are made for the Wizard Slayer class only.

Together they form a set.

However, the sets only have the same background story, so there is no loss of power of the items if they are not equipped on the same character.

All items are unidentified which will get the generic vanilla in-game description if unidentified.

All items are equippable after the user reaches level 4.

All image formats are PNG.

Descriptions

Weave to Dust

This enchanted katana is called "Weave to Dust". The weapon’s name comes from its ability to dispel any wards a caster has cast on themselves with one successful hit. It is actually part of a set of Wizard Slayer gear. Upon closer inspection, it is clear that this jeweled hilt sword is not a classic kara-tur katana. It was forged in Calimshan by an unknown blacksmith. This smith has masterfully imbued the gem with the magic that gives the unusual weapon its unusual properties. It is clear that the design idea behind this katana is to combine a near-perfect battle sword with the stunning aesthetic of the Calimshan Forge. Further inspection reveals, that the magic in this item seems to be somehow incomplete. The customer who commissioned this unusual sword from the unknown smith, is himself known as Akun Zaran, a halfling Wizard Slayer.

Combat abilities:

- 20% chance to cast „Dispel Magic“ on its target after a successful hit.

Restrictions:

- Character needs level 4 to equip „Weave to Dust“

- Can only be equipped by Wizard Slayer

Power Crave

The enchanted katana known as "Power Crave" is actually part of a set of Wizard Slayer gear. Its name comes from its ability to increase in power with each successful hit, up to a maximum of +3. The power increase decreases over time or as power is consumed. As the power of the sword increases, its shape changes to reflect its strength. At first glance, "Power Crave" appears to be in very poor condition, and indeed the weapon, due to its very unusual hilt, is uncomfortable to hold. However, upon closer inspection, it becomes clear that this weapon is not a classic Kara-Tur katana. The magic of the sword comes from the three jewels on the hilt, which were forged in Calimshan by an unknown blacksmith. Further investigation reveals that the magic within the sword is somehow incomplete. The customer who commissioned "Power Crave" from the unknown smith, is himself known as Akun Zaran, a halfling Wizard Slayer.

Combat abilities:

- Increases the off-hands chance to hit as if it were equipped with the main hand while the weapon is charged

- Increases its magic level by +1 with each hit, up to a maximum of +3

- +1 gives the wielder one chance to hit to increase to +2 for 1 rounds

- +2 gives the wielder a chance of two hits, increasing to +3 for 2 rounds

- +3 allows the wielder three attacks for 2 rounds, after which the sword reverts to its non-magical state

Restrictions:

- Main hand only

- Character needs level 4 to equip „Power Crave“

- Can only be equipped by Wizard Slayer

Layers of Compassion

The enchanted plate armor known as "Layers of Compassion" is actually part of a set of Wizard Slayer gear. Its name comes from its ability to absorb various types of magical damage. The golden appearance of the armor is purely a design choice, but the glowing green jewel in the center of the armor is not. This jewel is the source of the armor's magic, and it was forged in Calimshan by an unknown blacksmith. Whoever created "Layers of Compassion" appears to be a master of arcane forging, as the armor is incredibly well-made. However, upon closer inspection, the magic in the armor seems somehow incomplete. The customer who commissioned "Layers of Compassion" from the unknown smith was Akun Zaran, a halfling Wizard Slayer.

Combat abilities:

- 25% resistance to fire, cold, electricity, poison, acid and magical damage

Restrictions:

- Character needs level 4 to equip „Layers of Compassion“

- Can only be equipped by Wizard Slayer
